

Hey, I wonder what leaders of the civil rights movement had to say about comparisons between gay rights and civil rights?

Let's take a look!

For starters, here's Julian Bond, former sit-in leader and head of the NAACP, who literally said that "gay rights are civil rights."

https://www.youtube.com/embed/-fpIYG2BEb0

NAACP chair says 'gay rights are civil rights'

Julian Bond receives Equality Virginia award

By EARTHA MELZER Friday, April 08, 2005

Dr. Julian Bond, chair of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was awarded Equality Virginia's Equality Commonwealth Award in Richmond on April 2 and delivered a speech affirming gay rights as civil rights.

And how about John Lewis, former head of SNCC who was at the forefront of countless civil rights protests, who saw LGBT rights as an integral part of that work.

https://www.youtube.com/embed/7Wsi71F_T9Q

JOHN LEWIS: I fought too hard and too long against discrimination based on race and color not to stand up and speak up against discrimination against our gay and lesbian brothers and sisters. I see the right to marriage as a civil rights issue.

Let's not forget Coretta Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King Jr. who likewise saw gay rights as an extension of the civil rights cause.

KING'S WIDOW STANDS UP FOR GAY CIVIL RIGHTS

Coretta Scott King, activist and widow of slain civil rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., said Tuesday she has received advice from people to avoid involvement in the gay civil rights movemen...

https://www.chicagotribune.com/news/ct-xpm-1998-04-01-9804010141-story.html

"For many years now, I have been an outspoken supporter of civil and human rights for gay and lesbian people," King said at the 25th Anniversary Luncheon for the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund. "I've always felt that homophobic attitudes and policies were unjust and unworthy of a free society and must be opposed by all Americans who believe in democracy."

She said she reminds those who dislike gays that her husband professed injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

And how about Jesse Jackson, aide to King and leader of Operation PUSH and the Rainbow Coalition, who also saw discrimination against LGBT individuals as a civil rights issue.

Voice for Equality: The Rev. Jesse Jackson | Freedom to Marry

Browse our featured posts or search the archives from Freedom to Marry's blog, which tracked breaking news developments, featured analyses of the fight for marriage, and showcased stories of momentum...

http://www.freedomtomarry.org/blog/entry/voice-for-equality-the-rev.-jesse-jackson

"We stand together today as equal members of the human family.... as consistent principled advocates for human rights for all people. We stand together today to uphold the principles of due process, of equal protection under the law, of fighting against discrimination against any and all people based on race, religion, gender or sexual orientation.

I could go on, but you get the point.

And, of course, there were a number of civil rights leaders -- Bayard Rustin, Pauli Murray, James Baldwin, to name a few -- who were themselves LGBT and naturally saw "civil rights" and "gay rights" as intertwined.

So, yes, someone here sure is crazy. But it isn't Senator Warren.

As a P.S., check out this great thread by @timothysw if you haven't already:

• • •